CEO Leah Brown to Judge Ernst & Young Entrepreneur Of The Year® 2011 Awards for The Carolinas

Cary, N.C. – Ernst & Young LLP Entrepreneur Of The Year® Awards announced that Leah Brown, President and CEO of A10 Clinical Solutions, Inc., has been selected to be on the 2011 independent judging panel for the Carolinas. The panel, which chooses both the regional Entrepreneur Of The Year® award finalists and award recipients, is composed of local business leaders, leading CEOs and private capital investors. At a black-tie gala on Thursday, June 9, at the Westin Charlotte, the 2011 finalists and award recipients, some of the most innovative and successful entrepreneurs in our area, will be recognized before more than 500 business leaders throughout the Carolinas.

Brown herself received the 2010 Entrepreneur Of The Year® Award in the Carolinas in the category: Socially Responsible. Brown founded A10 in 2005 after years of grief following the death of her dear uncle from HIV/AIDS at a time when adequate medicines and education were not available to save him. Using her personal savings and a few small loans, she built a powerhouse company whose mission is healing the world. A10 now works with global pharmaceutical companies, government agencies, medical and academic research centers and corporations to bring innovative new drugs to market faster and safer for those who need them most. Additionally, A10 partners with companies to help drive down healthcare costs through onsite employee clinics that incorporate long-term health and wellness initiatives.

“The Ernst & Young Entrepreneur Of The Year® judges are amazing, accomplished entrepreneurs and business leaders in their own right,” said David Hood, Program Partner for the Entrepreneur Of The Year® program in the Carolinas. “Many have won the Entrepreneur Of The Year® award in the past. This program is truly by entrepreneurs, for entrepreneurs.”

- Joseph Brantuk, Vice President Global Corporate Client Group, NASDAQ

- Ed McMahan, Partner, Falfurrias Capital Partners
